

End of Life Questionnaire

To create a document of “advanced directives,” you should refer to your individual State’s requirements, and consider these questions:

- Do you want to donate viable organs or tissue for transplant?
- Do you want to donate your body to medical research or education?
- Do you have a preference for burial or cremation?
- Do you have an idea where you’d like your remains to be placed?
- What are your thoughts for a memorial or religious service?
- Are there situations that you would consider worse than death?
- What if you could no longer recognize or interact with friends or family?
- What if you required some apparatus, like a breathing machine or feeding tube, to keep you alive?
- Are there any religious or spiritual matters to consider should you be unable to represent yourself in decision-making?

last reviewed: / /

Some people prefer to document their answers. Either way, these questions should be revisited from time to time, to make sure they still reflect your feelings accurately.